Veterans honored

With patriotic music and salute

Congressman Gene Taylor delivered a combination uplifting and sobering address to observe Veterans Day, Friday, at the Bourgeois-Stieffel-Ray American Legion in Waveland.

"It's a great privilege to be here at home," he told the crowd. He reminded them of his membership on the Armed Services Committee and said he was a "solid supporter of the nation's veterans.

Taylor said he had been part of the D-Day memorials in June of this year and related his feelings as he viewed the ceremonies in London, England and in Normandy, France.

Standing "amongst the tombstones" in Normandy, he said he was touched by the number of men who had made the supreme sacrifice for their country.

He thanked the veterans for their gift of time, saying the country "cannot give you back your years." He pointed out that many had suffered the loss of eyes, legs and arms but that there were also "invisible scars

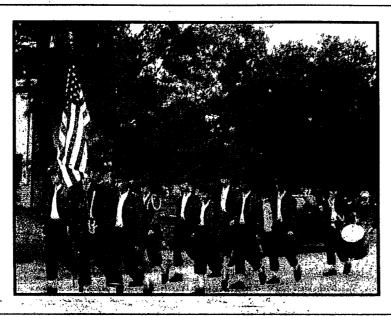

"Words of gratitude are inadequate," Taylor said. He wants to see the United States continue to be a nation worthy of its veterans because its people are "not afraid of saying "In God We Trust."

Taylor's address was a culmination of a morning that included a parade sponsored by the veterans and auxiliary organizations. Marching bands, including Bay High, Hancock High, St. Stanislaus and Pearl River Community College, teamed with Keesler AFB Dragon Phyfe and Drum Corp to provide patriotic music that set the mood for the day.

Airport deficit, growth targeted by officials

BY MARY G. SEILEY

Stennis International Airport was some $200,000 over budget in the last fiscal year -but officials say they're battling to make the facility selfsustaining and an economic development asset to Hancock County.

The once-sleepy, almost forgotten airport was pressed into action with the advent of casino charter flights. Almost over-was seeing major aircraft action daily, with hundreds of passengers landing and taking off.

stood firm Thursday with a controversial decision to revamp firefighting and rescue operations at Stennis International Airport.

We feel confident that what we did was right and so did the Board of Supervisors," said Hal Walters, executive director of the county Port and Harbor Commission.

He made the comment after a joint session of the board and members of the commission heard a rehash of complaints from firefighters and rescue personnel who walked off their jobs last week at the airport --13 minutes before a charter flight of casino patrons was to

While some of the issues were aired in a public portion of the meeting, the commissioners and supervisors met in closed session for almost an hour to hash out the controversy. When they emerged, they announced resolve to stick with a shift to full-time firefighter personnel.

The firefighters' walk-off was a protest to several changes airport officials have made under the direction of a new airport director, Bill Stovall. Key among those changes is a decision to replace 13 part-time slots with six full-time firefighter positions.

In addition, officials have changed the responsibilities of J.C. Webber, formerly "chief" of the airport fire department. Stovall will run the daily operations of the department, and Webber will be used as a consul-

Bay authorizes capital outlay study

BY MARY G. SEILEY City officials have approved a third phase of consultant work on the Bay St. Louis Comprehensive development plan. The new contract with Continental Consultants calls for a capital improvements program for long-range and short-term outlays, based on recommendations in the overall plan.

City officials agreed to pay up $5,700 for the capital provements document, and another $1,000 for a series of maps depicting existing and proposed land uses.

Work on the comprehensive plan began in February. The document is expected to be ready for adoption before the end of the year, after public hearings on the consultants' recommendations.

Planning and Zoning Commission officials were given an 88-page draft of the plan on Nov. 1, to review and edit, according to an update memor-andum given City Council members Tuesday night. A final draft should be available by Tuesday, the memo from Planning and Zoning Com-mission chairman Les Filling ame said.

the session, references were made to the need to stabilize expenses at the airport.

After the session, commission executive director Hal Walters was more specific -- the airport had a budget of $481,000 for fiscal 1994, but expenses ran some $690,000.

The expenses included some $119,000 in salaries for parttime fire and rescue personnel, Walters said, and $14,000 for a part-time chief. In addition, a part-time interim director of airport operations was paid some $40,000, Walters said.

Changing to a smaller, fulltime emergency force is expected to save some money: Walters said wages should total between $64,400 and $93,600, depending on whether the commission hires six or four fulltime emergency personnel immediately.

The former chief's salary has been eliminated as such, but there will be payments for his services as a training consultant.

And the part-time airport director has been replaced by full-timer Bill Stovall, at a salary of $48,000, said Walters.

Aside from shifts in personnel, the commission has a major infusion of federal funds on the

The airport will shut down temporarily Nov. 28, when $1.8 million in federal upgrades begin at the facility.

Those upgrades include construction of a new concrete apron to park aircraft, and resurfacing, grooving and striping the runway. Walters said by the time the new runway is open for business early next year, Casino Magic's charter flight program will be offering overnight trips for gamblers. That'll increase the passenger volume at the airport twofold, said Stovall.

As it stands, the airport expects to accommodate some 74,000 passenger enplanement and deplanements during this fiscal year -- second only to the business seen at Biloxi and Jackson airports. Stennis' grants from the FAA for upgrades were the second largest in the state this year. But there's much more on the airport's platter. Commission officials hope to launch a master plan for airport development -a plan that probably will enhance the airport's chances of federal upgrade funding.

Once the airport is fully certified. said Walters, it'll qualify for funds from a much more substantial FAA "pot" of money than currently, And much more money is needed. Stoyall and Walters said. The airport lighting and wiring system needs to be totally replaced, for instance.

Walters said the antiquated lights now at the airport are obsolete and expensive. Last month, the commission paid some $714 in one month to have an electrician change lightbulbs and do other minor work on the system, he said as an example.

FAA officials are urging airport authorities to relocate the fuel farm that's now underground near the terminal. While they're at that, officials want to increase the fuel farm's capacity, to accommodate skyrocketing sales of fuel.

Officials are considering a lease, or lease-purchase, of new fuel farm equipment, to save

While the upgrades are in progress, officials are waging an aggressive effort to lure new businesses to the adjoining air park -- one new business already has been announced for the facility.

Stovall said negotiations are underway with two other companies, including a food products company and a water treatment chemical firm.

In addition, talks are in progress with two air cargo companies which may want to relocate to Stennis from more expensive airport facilities elsewhere, Walters said.

In the not-too-distant future, he added, the airport may be able to lure scheduled passenger services.

Last year's budget deficit at Stennis was made up from revenues at the other facilities the commission operates, including Port Bienville Industrial Park and railroad facilities.

"We're going to have to spend some money to make some money," Walters said of the airport. But the airport can't continue to rely on the industrial park railroad for subsidy, he added. And, he said, the airport needs to diversify rather than become overly dependent on casino-related flights.

The new airport director is confident the facility can be made self-sustaining, said Walters, which would be a rare accomplishment in the airport

BY MARY C. SELLEY. Hancock County Port and larbor officials say they're elated over recent acquisition of Gulf Coast Fabrication Inc. by Trinity Industries of Dallas.

The merger was announced Tuesday, making the locally-based Gulf Coast Fabrication the 16th shipyard in the Trinity Marine Group, based in Gulfport.

Port officials expect the merger will generate additional business and jobs at Port Bienville Industrial Park, where Gulf Coast Fabrication is located.

Gulf Coast Fabrication's name and employee roster of some 160 workers is expected to remain the same. Dan Mortimer and Fred May, the shipyard's former owners, will join Trinity Marine's management case.

Officials said Morimes will become a senior vice president of Trinity Marine, and cashin as president of Gulf Coast Fabrication May will continue to serve as vice president of Culf Coast Fabrication. Coast Pabrication.

Since the Nov. 2 walk-off, Stovall has had substitute firefighter personnel, from outside Hancock County, on hand at the airport for the arrival and departure of aircraft.

He said Port and Harbor officials view the part-timers who have refused to work as former employees. "From our point of view, they quit," Walters said. One of the protesting firefigthters, Peggy Axtell said they have neither quit nor been fired. But she asked twice for the commission members and supervisors to take a position on the recent changes and conditions the firefighters have voiced protest over the airport.

Axtell and Thomas Bilbo, an assistant chief of the Kiln Fire Department, said told the meeting that firefighters have been forced to use "condemned" equipment at the airport, and Axtell said female firefighters are discriminated against.

The equipment at issue, said Axtell later, is personally owned "silver suit" gear that was purchased for training purposes only. The suits' protective coatings, she said, are worn and flaking, and could put a person in jeopardy during a fire.

Walters said if the suits indeed have been "condemned" by federal aviation officials, as Axtell claims, they should have been destroyed by the owners.

The airport has a number of such suits on hand which are in fine condition, said Walters. He said Federal Aviation Authority officials would be asked to look at the suits of concern to the firefighters.

The commission is advertising for applications for its new full-time firefighter positions.

Commission officials said as of Thursday, none of the parttimers had applied for the jobs, although they have been urged to do so. Walters said every effort would be made to hire local personnel for the new slots.

Commission chairman David McDonald told the firefighters that any decision to change the staff levels, hours or duties have been made with "no personalities involved.'

Cutbacks in personel, he said, are common in businesses -- he pointed to area casinos as an example. "You simply cannot run a business with more people than required," McDonald said.

Budgeting for Legislature to be easier in 1995

state treasury at a faster rate hardly comprehend, making side. the budgeting job of the legislature far easier in 1995 than the bare-bones years of the 1980s.

Of course, the Fordice Administration would like to take credit for all the good news in Mississippi and ignore the fact that we're sharing in the strong economy nationally for which President Clinton rightfully can take some credit.

Mississippi, say economists here has had a slightly higher growth than most states the past year, being pumped up by the casino gaming industry which didn't even exist three years ago.

But they say other factors which have helped the Southern states generally are the downsizing and shutdown of industries and plants elsewhere in the country, which has not affected this area as much because of the lower wage differential in the South. The South remains the best hope of many companies to avoid having to move out of the country to hold down labor costs.

While Mississippi's economy is growing better than it has for years, economists say it is still not as rapid a pace as the construction boom years of the early 1970s. Those were the days when the Tenn-Tom Waterway was being constructed, along with a huge pulpwood plant in Mississippi and the Yellow Creek TVA generating plant and Ingalls Shipbuilding was a peak employment.

Still, the state revenue picture is excellent, making it possible for legislators to adequately fund long-starved state services and do a few things the state was not able to do before. Just since the 1994 legislature adjourned in April and signed off on the FY95 budget, legislative fiscal leaders have raised projections for the current year (ending next June 30) by $128.6 million.

Last week House and Senate members of the Legislative Budget Office adopted a revenue estimate of $2.61 billion for FY 96, a figure that is $52.7 million over FY 95 or a projected growth rate of 2.1 percent. Even though Fordice leaders wanted to put the estimated

Revenues are rolling into the growth rate lower than that, legislative budgeteers say it than state fiscal leaders can actually is on the conservative

> Lawmakers are having to big chunk of the seeming bonanza to pay for obligated expenditures, including $30.5 million for roads to casinos (out of gaming revenues); $25 million for the county bridge construction fund launched last year; $46 million to reimburse income taxes paid by federal retirees; and $50 million to pay back Medicaid overcharges.

> If the money wasn't on hand to do those things, the legislature wouldn't be able to handle such big items without wringing them out of ordinary state services.

But there is still enough leverage in prospect for lawmakers to do some long hopedfor things. One is the goal of state Rep. Charlie Capps (Cleveland) the House Appropriations Chairman to launch a college scholarship-grant program for qualified graduating high school students in a move to keep brighter graduates in this state. His tentative plan is to start the scholarship fund with $10 million.

Also, the legislature can put some money ($23 million projected) into long-neglected repair and renovation of state buildings.

Back in August, lawmakers in special session anted up $73 million in cash to build some 4,500 new prison beds. That's nice and pleased Gov. Fordice. But what about Fordice's mandate to cut down the state payroll?

When you add 4,500 prison beds you have to hire some 2,000 new correctional employees to staff them. And as for the idea of private prisons, taxpayers are still paying for the extra help, it just doesn't show up on the state payroll.

Fordice's "Businessman's" approach to government is coming under heavy fire at the moment from state employees over the switch in companies to handle payments under the State Health Insurance Plan.

The state Department of Finance and Administration, whose director Ed Ranck, takes

State shows sharp increase in safety belt use

in Mississippi over the past two years increased 75 percent, child protective device use increased 177 percent and 98 percent of motorcyclists were using helmets, according to a survey commissioned by the Mississippi Division of Public Safety Planning.

The survey, conducted by Mississippi State University, indicated that 43.32 percent of motorists in Mississippi were using safety belts and that 47.6 the protective devices.

The safety belt findings were based upon 32,962 observations and the child protective device findings upon 3,338. A 1992 survey indicated that only 24.8 percent of motorists were using safety belts and that only 17.2 percent of children were buckled into child protective devices. Helmet use by motorcyclists has continued a pattern of more than 95 percent.

Commissioner of Public Safety Jim Ingram said, "The results of this survey are indicative of the progress Mississippi is making in public safety, but the impact goes far beyond numbers. As more and more Mississippians buckle up, families across our state will be spared the sorrow of losing a loved one and individuals the suffering that comes with permanent injuries.'

Thomas J. Enright, National Highway Traffic Safety Administration regional administrator, in a letter to Donald O'Cain, Public Safety Planning's executive director, said, "The dramatic progress the state's usage rates are showing is testimony to contributions made by all the highway safety operatives throughout Mississippi.

"Safety belt and child restraint use programs are proven strategies we have for saving lives and reducing injuries in highway crashes," Enright noted, "and we are pleased to see Mississippi maintain emphasis on these countermeasures.

O'Cain said much of the credit for the increased use should go to the Mississippi Association of Highway Safety Leaders,

Motor vehicle safety belt use a group of volunteers form many professions that has stressed the use of safety belts and child protective devices via educational campaigns and a wide range of other activities. He also commended Gov. and Mrs. Kirk Foridce for their "leadership in stressing the use of these lifesaving devices" and the Legislature for passing legislation that requires all drivers, front-seat passengers and children under the age of 4 to use occupant protection

> "It's encouraging to see motorists increasingly recognizing that the use of safety belts or child protective devices can be the difference between being killed or seriously injured in a crash or escaping virtually unharmed," O'Cain said.

Billy Terrell, director of Public Safety Planning's Office of Highway Safety, noted that "The 'human collision' is what usually injures and kills persons involved in a motor vehicle crash. This occurs when occupants of the vehicle not wearing safety belts or buckled into child protective devices are thrown into the vehicle's windshield, steering wheel, doors, dashboard, other interior surfaces or other passengers. These surfaces become instruments of death when individuals are thrown against them with the forces generated in a vehicle crash. Also, those who are not buckled up can be thrown from the vehicle and hit the pavement with a force potent enough to cause death or serious injuries.

"A safety belt or child protective device prevents this 'human collision' by holding you in place, and they spread the force of the crash over the strongest parts of the body,' Terrell added.

"While we're happy about the progress being made, our stu-dies indicate that, of the motorists killed each year in highway crashes, more than 300 could be saved through the use of safety belts and child protective devices," O'Cain noted. "Buckling up is one of the best safety steps motorists can take."

South Central Bell's new 1994 directory is coming to the residents of Hancock County. Delivery of the new MS Gulf Coast Directory began Nov. 10 and will include listings for the Mississippi Gulf Coast.

"Our Customers will notice several new enhancements to the new directory. We are introducing user-friendly features like a redesign of the Real Yellow Pages, addition of ZIP codes to directory listings and an increased type size of the white page listings for easier reading," said local South Central Bell assistant manger Tim Ryan.

The redesigned Real Yellow Pages will include interesting new graphics, a subject index, a physicians and surgeons index, community information, seating charts and a government QuickFind page.

"The addition of ZIP codes to the white page listings is in response to customer requests," according to Ryan.

For some time, our customers have been telling us they want ZIP codes in their directories. By adding this feature and increasing the type size we make our directories an even more valuable information source.'

The new directory cover highlights the scenic beauty of Mississippi.

"Our state is known for its abundant waterways and for unspoiled, natural woodlands. The state is using the 'Colors of Mississippi' photo which is featured on the cover to promote the state's beauty and economic potential in its economic development efforts," Ryan said.

"By using this Mississippi scene South Central Bell is showing that it supports Mississippi's economic development through its extensive investment in the telecommunications network and the work of its employees in communities around the state," Ryan said. Over 168,000 of the new MS Gulf Coast Directory will be distributed in this area. Ryan asks that customers allow at least three weeks for completion of deliveries. Anyone who hasn't received a new directory by Dec. 2 should call the South Central Bell business office.

By Jimmie Brewer

Good morning all you campaign-weary Southerners.

Well, the big election is over, and all over the country conservative Republicans are rejoicing as they anticipate having a majority in both Houses of Congress for the first time in 40

You know, there was a time when I took politics very seriously. On any given election night you could find me glued to the TV set. I would root for my party and candidates as enthusiastically as I would for my favorite football team on Superbowl Sunday.

Some two and a half decades ago when I was nothing more than a freckle-faced half-pint, you could find me standing in front of a voting place handing out cards to strangers and asking them to vote for someone they didn't even know, who was my dad. In junior high school and in high school I never passed up an opportunity in history or in debating class to challenge classmates to a debate. I always took the side of whoever happened to be the candidate for the Democratic Party. I debated vigorously when McGovern was running against Nixon and again when Carter was the presidential candidate. Both times I won easily. In fact, for years I passionately thought that the Democratic Party was always the right choice, and accordingly I always voted a straight party ticket.

I mean, after all, it was the Democratic platform that included: a better education system for our children, help for the disabled, help for the farmers of America, housing for the homeless, a nice retirement for the elderly, less nuclear weapons, safer work places, better health care, etc.

And so for the last 50 years or so program after program has been launched by well-meaning congressmen to better the United States of America.

And God bless them for sincerely trying to help, but I am afraid that in doing so they have opened the flood gates and provided no-gooders the opportunity to take advantage of these programs and deprive the very people they were intended to

Now we have a government which is way too big, and we have created an entire generation who believe that the government owes them everything.

Folks, it's time to wake up! National politics is not what's going to mend this country. It is you and I who can make a real difference in the quality of life. It is time that American people, not politicians and government, help the needy. It's time for us to provide safer working conditions, not because of governmental regulations, but because it's the right thing to and dudettes have a blast today.

I think it's time we all roll up our sleeves and go to work to make a difference in our own worlds.

Council also hired an architect to design renovations to the depot, heard preliminary plans for upgrading the city's water system, and approved the site plans for a new office building on Highway 90.

Bids for the sewer system extension came in higher than city officials had anticipated. and it remained unclear Tuesday how the city would finance the work.

Mayor Eddie Favre said he would outline a financing scheme at the council's next meeting, involving a "creative" way to pay for the work.

Meanwhile, council awarded two contracts to GM&R Construction Co., the low bidder for Phase 2 and Phase 3 of the sew-

Phase 2, at a cost of $734,904, covers extension of the city system in the newly annexed area north of the Highway 90 bridge, including Engman Avenue, Julia, Thomas and Blakemore streets, Riverside Drive, Pogo Street, Cedar Ridge Avenue and North Beach Boulevard.

Phase 3, at a cost of $476,161, will provide sewer service to residents of portions of the Old Spanish Trail, St. Charles, Citizen and Washington streets and Bayou Galere Road.

Favre said negotiations with GM&R had trimmed some $25,000 from low bidder's initial offer. To get the savings, the city agreed to let GM&R decide if both phases will be constructed concurrently, or consecutively.

In other business, council agreed to hire Kevin Fitzpatrick as the architect for the depot project. Fitzpatrick had been recommended after consultants who are spearheading the project reviewed professional services proposals from several area architects.

Favre said Fitzpatrick in essence has a month to complete his design work, as the city remains under the gun to qualify for federal funds to renovate the former CSX structure. The mayor said under terms of the contract, Fitzpatrick will receive up to $56,000 for the project, if it goes from design through construction completion.

Councilman James Thriffiley raised concerns over the city's financial responsibility to pay for full services in the event the project doesn't get off the ground. The mayor, however, said the city would be liable only for services rendered, if the project somehow is aborted.

In the water treatment matter, an "Aqua Mag" water sys-tem upgrade under study by city officials calls for injection of a liquid, inorganic phosphate complex into supplies at the city's three water wells. Officials say the system should improve discoloration in the water, and assist chlorine in killing bacteria.

The same system is used in Gulfport, Waveland and Harrison County. Waveland's utilities director, Michael Barnes, said in a letter to Bay St. Louis officials they've used the system for two years, and recommend Pumps, installation and supplies for the system total some $2,480 initially, under a price quotation from Coast Chlorinator & Pump Co., Inc., of Biloxi. Favre said the city won't need to take bids for such a system, because it is priced under the mandated level for public bids.

Site plans for a one-story office building on Highway 90 were approved, based on recommendations from the Planning and Zoning Commission.

With some 4,559 square feet the new structure will house a State Farm claims adjustment office. Favre said. The building is planned for a lot between Evergreen Nursery and the Wheel-Inn Restaurant.

Good communications aid latchkey children

Latchkey children — those who care for themselves when they aren't in school and their parents are at work - are products of a changing society. More and more families need two incomes to meet the rising cost of living; single-parent homes are increasing; and child-care programs often are unavailable or unaffordable. The end result often is neither mom nor dad are waiting at home for a child after school.

Linda Christian, crime prevention training officer at The University of Mississippi, says good communications between children, parents, neighbors and schools can promote feelings of security in kids who must stay alone.

The University Police Department has a 10-minute video on promoting safety with lends to schools and civic organizations in the Oxford area. She also suggested the following tips for all parents:

• Discuss arrangements with children. Explain to your child why they must be on their own, how long they'll be alone and what's expected of them during that time, Christian said. Also, be clear as to who is in charge in the parent's absence. If children are close in age, consider rotating the responsibility from week to

• Set up a telephone network. Be sure school personnel know how to reach you in an emergency. If your job permits, tell children when they may check in with you at work. Give your work phone number to at children that Christian often least one of your neighbors, she suggested.

• Return home on time. If you tell your children you'll be home at a certain time, be sure you are. Even stopping for a few minutes can cause children undue worry. If you can't avoid being late, call your children.

• Improve arrangements. Don't hesitate to change rules if the ones you've set up aren't working, the Ole Miss officer advised. As children grow older and their needs change, it may also be necessary to adjust arrangements.

• Make shared time count. The quality — not the quantity - of time you spend with your children is what really matters. Christian said. Plan special activities that you can enjoy together. Allow time for your children to discuss their day and to express feelings about being alone, caring for younger siblings, etc.

The Hancock County Library System has a solid image in Hancock County, and is regarded as a great attribute of the county, according to a survey recently conducted for the City-County Library Board

Hancock Bank will soon be the first business in South Mississippi to be served through South Central Bell's Community Crossroads (CCR).

CCR is a connection to the Information Superhighway for all businesses across the Mississippi Gulf Coast. This new approach in the telecommunications marketplace will also allow companies with different computer systems to "talk" over a single network.

Although Hancock Bank is the first customer, it won't be the only one. Through the pledged commitment of Hancock Bank, the "anchor tenant,"

Hancock Bank of Louisiana has already implemented this program through its operation in Baton Rouge. Community Crossroads will allow businesses in Baton Rouge, New Orleans, and the Coast to share the same benefits of the improved communication network.

Hancock Bank President George Schloegel said, "We are pleased and excited with this new partnership with South Central Bell and CCR. The net result of this new technology for our customers will be faster business transactions and more efficient services.

"This benefit will be available to all other businesses in South Mississippi who can now

"We recognize that the "one-size-fits-all" approach to tech-nology deployment is no longer appropriate. Instead, we are fitting today's technologies to our customers' unique needs.

"CCR allows us to mix and match emerging and existing data, image and video communication technologies to fit these specific customer needs."
